Bioinformatics: New programs expected, fall 2004

The Center for the Study of Biological Complexity within VCU Life Sciences will soon begin accepting applications for new bioinformatics programs at the undergraduate and graduate levels, pending state approval. Bioinformatics courses will be opened as early as fall 2004 for undergraduate and graduate students. As courses are opened, students will be able to find them online through e-services' open course search, using BINF as the subject code.

Students will find descriptions of the bioinformatics programs on the VCU web at http://www.vcu.edu/csbc/education.html. Full course descriptions can be found under VCU Life Sciences in the VCU Bulletins.