HIST 332 HISTORY IN FILM: THE 1970'S (3)

12316 SECTION 002
MTWRF 0900AM 1150AM BUSNS 2114 RAYMOND, E
The 1970s witnessed the birth of the "new Hollywood." New maverick directors, like Martin Scorsese, confronted the tensions of the day, while the old studios focused on terror-driven blockbusters like "Jaws." This class will explore the social political and economic context of the 1970s that prompted Hollywood to vacillate between dissidence and escapism and, thus, resulted in an authentic golden age of film.

HIST 332 HIST IN FILM: COLD WR & COUNTERC (3)

12406 SECTION 901
MW 0600PM 0840PM LFSCB 0250 TUNNELL, T
Through films, readings and lectures, this course examines American society and culture from the witch hunts of the 1950s to Vietnam and the counterculture of the 1960s.

OPEN STUDIO COURSE. In this flexible open studio course, students may make their own class schedule to fit summer work and study plans. The 3-credit section requires three drawing assignments and the 2-credit course requires two. While students may start, attend and finish on their own schedules, the instructor will be available from 1 to 6 p.m., Monday through Friday, in the assigned studio, which will be open when the Pollak Building is open.

Learn the basics of the design language, which is fundamental to the understanding of all aspects of Western architecture, art and design. The course will be useful for interior design, art history, graphic design and other majors, as well as professional interior designers and architects or members of the general public who want to know more about the design language that has formed so much of Richmond's and America's built environment.

OPEN STUDIO COURSE. In this flexible open studio course, students may make their own class schedule to fit summer work and study plans. The 3-credit section requires three drawing assignments and the 2-credit course requires two. While students may start, attend and finish on their own schedules, the instructor will be available from 1 to 6 p.m., Monday through Friday, in the assigned studio, which will be open when the Pollak Building is open.

Learn the basics of the design language, which is fundamental to the understanding of all aspects of Western architecture, art and design. The course will be useful for interior design, art history, graphic design and other majors, as well as professional interior designers and architects or members of the general public who want to know more about the design language that has formed so much of Richmond's and America's built environment.

Back for the 12th summer, the instructor is Peter Hodson of the School of Architecture, University of Portsmouth, England, and visiting professor in VCU's Department of Interior Design.

OPEN STUDIO COURSE. In this flexible open studio course, designed especially for graduate interior design students and professional interior designers, students may make their own class schedule to fit summer work and study plans. While students may start, attend and finish on their own schedules, the instructor will be available from 1 to 6 p.m., Monday through Friday, in the assigned studio, which will be open when the Pollak Building is open.

Learn the basics of the design language, which is fundamental to the understanding of all aspects of Western architecture and interior design and then apply it to a "live" interior design brief to be agreed upon with the instructor.

Back for the 12th summer, the instructor is Peter Hodson of the School of Architecture, University of Portsmouth, England, and visiting professor in VCU's Department of Interior Design.
